

The graduate model of undergraduate student of Shymkent University

7M01711-Foreign language: two foreign languages a graduate of a master's degree who has studied a foreign language must have professional competencies corresponding to the types of professional activities focused on:

Research activities:

- * the possibility of forming diagnostic solutions to professional problems by integrating fundamental branches of science and specialized knowledge acquired during the development of the Master's degree program;
- * the ability to independently conduct scientific experiments and research in the professional field, summarize and analyze experimental information, draw conclusions, formulate conclusions and suggestions;
- * the ability to create and explore models of the studied objects based on the use of in-depth theoretical and practical knowledge in the field of land management, able to realize their professional knowledge, skills and abilities in public and private management, design and research organizations of any form;

Scientific and production activities:

- * the ability to independently carry out production and scientific - production field, laboratory and interpretative work in solving practical problems in the field of land management; the ability to professionally use modern field and laboratory equipment and devices in the field of the master's degree program;
- * the possibility of using modern methods of processing and interpreting complex information to solve scientific and industrial problems;

Project activities:

- * scientific research;
- * designing;
- * educational and methodical
- * production management

Organizational and managerial activities:

- * willingness to use practical skills in organizing and managing research and scientific production work in solving professional tasks;

* readiness for the practical use of regulatory documents in the planning and organization of scientific and production work.

Scientific and pedagogical activity:

* the ability to conduct seminars, laboratory and practical classes;

* the ability of students in the field of land management to participate in the management of scientific and educational work.

When mastering the educational program 7M01711-A foreign language: two foreign languages, all common cultural and general professional competencies related to the types of professional activities that the master's program focuses on, are included in the set of necessary results of mastering the master's program.